

Budding entrepreneurs impress all with their start up ideas at GNLU

DNAHM97796 | 2/27/2016 | Author : dna correspondent | WC :227 | Education & Careers

---

Law students participate in a competition held on Friday

To promote 'Startup India, Stand up India,' the GNLU Centre for Business & Public Policy had organised, 'Startup Venture Competition in Domain of Law' on Friday. The idea was to encourage youths pursuing higher education across the globe to innovate startup ventures. The domain area was law.

Pratham Darad and Shreya Kanaujia, winners of the competition, went home with Rs25,000 cash prize; certificates and they will be mentored by GNLU in the future. They had come up with a startup idea wherein people can connect to lawyers according to their needs. "We are planning to make an application wherein a layman can find lawyers according to their need. Usually in India, lawyers are appointed to fight cases through contacts and not merit," said Darad. He belongs to National Law University, Jodhpur, whereas his idea partner belongs to Indian Law Society, Pune.

Kartikey Gupta from National Law University, Orissa, came up with "Expertease". "Through this, law firms can connect with legal and expert witnesses. The aspect of expert witnesses is still unexplored in India," he said. Eight teams from across India had participated on Friday. The third winner from Govind

Ramnath Kare college, Gautami Raiker had come up with 'Lawmate.in'. "I want to provide legal services to start ups and entrepreneurs in Goa. Further, I wish to expand my idea to states facing similar problems like Goa."