

GNU to start fellowship programmes

Ahmedabad: Gujarat National Law University (GNU) has introduced five unique fellowship programmes from this month. It is aiming to provide a robust legal education and research system in the country through these specialized subjects.

GNU director Dr Bimal Patel said, "We want to assist stakeholders and policy-making institutions to mobilize funds as well as integrate our curriculum. Thus, we are starting programmes under the subjects real estate law, mergers and acquisitions, energy law, air and space law, and maritime and law of the sea." The fellowship programmes will not only cater to delivering certificate courses but also start a series of research works and training.

"We have got on board scholars from India and abroad who have practical knowledge on the subjects," Patel added. TNN
