A total of 129 undergraduate and post-graduate students were conferred degrees at the third convocation of Gujarat National Law University (GNLU) on Saturday.

The degrees were conferred on students by Supreme Court judge Anil R Dave in the presence of chief minister Narendra Modi. Nineteen gold medals were also awarded to students at the convocation.

Justice Dave told the graduating students to strive to continue learning.

"Your education is over, but don't cease to be students. Enhance your knowledge by learning as you go ahead in life," Justice Dave said. He described the students as ambassadors of GNLU and exhorted them to bring repute to the institute's name. CM Narendra Modi told students that they were so far in a protected environment, but they would now have to face the challenges of life on their own.

"There will be no one to guide you, and you will have to choose the path on your own. Whatever you have learnt here will help you in the future too," he said.

He exhorted the students to upgrade their skills and practical knowledge through keen observations. He cited the example of 'Eklavya' who is known for his dedication towards his teacher even after thousands of years. GNLU director Prof Bimal Patel presented the institute's progress report. He gave a brief outlay about GNLU's future plans.
