To mark the 70th year of adoption of the Constitution of India, Gujarat National Law University (GNLU) on Monday organised a seminar at Gujarat Raj Bhavan. The seminar, which aimed at recognising achievements of our Constitution in creating and maintaining a strong democratic society, had Governor of Gujarat Om

Prakash Kohli, Governor of Goa Mridula Sinha, law minister Bhupendrasinh Chudasama, former Chief Justice of Bombay High court Mohit Shah, constitutional and statutory authorities, senior officials from Gujarat government, retired judges of the Gujarat High court, senior faculty and students from GNLU and law institutions and colleges of Gujarat.

Interestingly, Mohit Shah, former chief justice of Bombay high court emphasized the latest judgments of the Supreme court on right to privacy, Aadhar card, Sabarimala case, LGBT which has contributed to the evolving jurisprudence in contributing to the fundamental rights.

Speaking at the event, Mridula Sinha, Governor of Goa underlined how the Indian society has been evolving and incrementally achieving justice and equality for all sections of the society despite all challenges. She narrated the success of the Goa Civil Code in ensuring the gender equality and a model code on equality and women empowerment.

Highlighting programmes like education enrollment, Bhupendrasinh Chudasama, Law and Justice minister said, "These initiatives have contributed to upliftment of overall living standards of women."
